AUTHOR: Vinoba Bhave

DESCRIPTION: Vinayaka Narahari 'Vinoba' Bhave is known as the National Teacher of India. and was an advocate of non-violence and human rights. Deeply influenced by the Bhagavad Gita, his talks on the text from prison during his freedom-fighting days were compiled and published as Talks on the Gita. Since then they have become a national treasure. Bhave said, "My body was nourished on my mother's milk, but my heart and intelligence have been nourished on the Gita's milk." His vision was to create a spiritual foundation for the whole of society. In this light, his Talks on the Gita and his translation of the Gita's 700 verses into Marathi, Gitaai, are his major contributions. He would say, "The world may forget all other services that I rendered, but will never forget these two. I was in a state of complete absorption (Samadhi) while composing the Gitaai and giving the talks on the Gita, hence I believe these creations will keep serving mankind."

Talks on the Gita has been translated into all Indian languages and many foreign languages. In these talks we find a spiritual approach to the practicalities of daily life, and thus they are very relevant today and will continue to transform lives in the future.
